Summary of findings

Overall summary

Laureston House Residential Home is a care home providing accommodation and personal care for older people and people living with dementia. The service can accommodate 21 people in an adapted building. At the time of the inspection there were 18 people living in the service. We found the following examples of good practice.

- The risk of infection from visitors was minimised. Visiting was by appointment only. There was a visitor pod in the vestibule so relatives could safely visit their family members. Visitors were able to access the pod without entering the service.
- Arrangements had been made for a relative who was an essential care giver to safely contribute to caring for their family member.
- There was a video portal enabling people living in the service to see and speak with their family members. Relatives also received a regular newsletter from the registered manager. These provided updates about developments in the service particularly relating to keeping people safe from Covid-19.
- New people were able to safely move into the service. A negative test for Covid-19 and a 14-day isolation period were in place. Health monitoring was in place both during the isolation period and afterwards to make sure people remained free from symptoms of infection.
- Adaptations had been made to the accommodation to support infection control. Safe routes to bedrooms had been identified to enable relatives in future to visit their family members while minimising the need to walk through the service to promote social distancing.
- The registered manager knew what government guidance said about managing risks associated with Covid-19. There were up-to-date infection control policies including those specific to Covid-19 and infection outbreaks.
- There was enough personal protective equipment for staff and visitors and this was being used in the right way.
- There were cleaning schedules in place. The service was neat and clean. Regular infection control audits were done by the infection control lead with actions followed up when necessary.
- People living in the service had consultations with their with doctors when necessary and the service received advice from specialist infection control nurses.
