Summary of findings

Overall summary

Cecil Court is a care home providing personal care for up to 45 people. The home is registered as a care home without nursing and nursing care is not provided. The home is located in the Kew Gardens area of west London. At the time of the inspection 41 people were receiving a service at the home.

We found the following examples of good practice.

There were robust and effective measures to prevent and minimise the risk to people, staff and those that visited from catching or spreading COVID-19.

We observed staff and managers wearing personal protective equipment (PPE) appropriately. Up to date infection prevention and control (IPC) and COVID-19 training was provided for staff, that was routinely updated. Adequate supplies of PPE were available that met current demand and anticipated outbreaks.

IPC and PPE policies, procedures and guidance were followed by staff. This incorporated ongoing changes to COVID-19 related guidance. It included contingency plans for managing adverse events, such as COVID-19 outbreaks and staff shortages. The registered manager toured the care home daily to ensure staff were using PPE, and following guidance.

Although access to the care home was restricted, due to an outbreak, designated people such as essential care givers could visit their relative or friend. People reaching the end of their life could also have visitors. This was in line with Government COVID-19 care home guidelines. All visitors to the care home had to follow the home's IPC guidance.

Appropriate communication arrangements were in place so that people could maintain relationships with relatives and friends. Staff actively supported people to keep in touch with those who could not visit the care home by telephone and using video calls.

Currently the care home was not accepting new referrals or people returning home from hospital due to a Covid-19 outbreak. Under normal circumstances new admissions or people returning after a hospital stay were required to have a negative COVID-19 test and self-isolate for 14 days to minimise the risk of the virus spreading.

A 'whole home' COVID-19 testing program was adopted by the care home. This ensured everyone living, working or visiting the care home was regularly tested for COVID-19. The provider knew how to apply for COVID-19 home testing kits and had adequate supplies.

The home was hygienic, clean and records were kept in detail of staff cleaning schedules. This included continuously cleaning high touch surfaces, such as light switches, grab rails and door handles as part of a rolling program to ensure cleanliness was maintained.

There were thorough assessments of infection risks to everyone living and working at the care home and if people were deemed to be disproportionately at risk from COVID-19, appropriate action was taken to reduce the impact. Staff with underlying health care conditions or other restricting factors, did not work on floors where people who had tested positive for COVID-19 had been or were self-isolating.

The provider had minimised the number of agency staff they used to those that had previous experience of the home to reduce the risk of spreading infection.

The provider's IPC policy was up to date and regularly reviewed.

The five questions we ask about services and what we found

We always ask the following five questions of services.

Detailed findings

Background to this inspection

We carried out this inspection under Section 60 of the Health and Social Care Act 2008 as part of our regulatory functions. This inspection was planned to check whether the provider is meeting the legal requirements and regulations associated with the Health and Social Care Act 2008.

As part of CQC's response to the COVID-19 pandemic we are looking at how services manage infection control and visiting arrangements. This was a targeted inspection looking at the infection prevention and control measures the provider had in place. We also asked the provider about any staffing pressures the service was experiencing and whether this was having an impact on the service.

This inspection took place on 26 January and was announced. We gave the service 48 hours notice of the inspection.
